Navegar: Pasatiempo para Latinos

Lou Sandoval ha convertido su pasatiempo de navegar en una profesión y desea llevar esa pasión por el deporte a otros latinos.

"Mientras crece la comunidad latina y nuestra juventud se aventura más allá de actividades tradicionales, una de las áreas que puede proveer oportunidades para subsidio educativo es programas colegiados de navegación", dijo Sandoval.

Algunos de los programas de navegación de los que habló tienen lugar en barrios de Chicago, como el Programa Navegación de Adaptación Judd Goldman ofrecido por el Distrito de Parques de Chicago y provee instrucción en aula y agua a gente discapacitada.

Otro programa, ofrecido mediante Judd Goldman, es un Programa Navegación Junior que enseña a los de 8 a 12 años cómo navegar en la Laguna del Parque Humboldt, 1400 N. Av. Sacramento, y en la Laguna del Parque Garfield, 100 N. Av.

"Cuán grandioso sería tener programas comunitarios de navegación en los que pudieran participar [jóvenes] latinos y exponerlos al deporte", añadió Sandoval. "Pasemos esa visión a jóvenes que compiten al lado de marineros jóvenes de orígenes diversos en algunos programas de navegación de grandes universidades de nuestro país".

El compromiso de Sandoval de navegar inició cuando ingresó a un Campamento de Niños Exploradores a la edad de 10. Ahora, como miembro regular del Club de Yates Chicago, su interés en navegar sigue creciendo: él es copropietario de Venta de Yates Karma, junto con su hermano y socio comercial.

Este fin de semana, Sandoval será uno de más de 3,500 marineros que participarán en la 102ª Carrera del Club de Yates Chicago a Mackinac el 24 de julio. El evento deportivo es la más antigua carrera de agua dulce en el mundo, con unos 375 botes corriendo 333 millas del faro Chicago (junto a Navy Pier) a Isla Mackinac, Mich.

Sandoval competirá en la carrera por 11ª vez. Su grupo navegante ganó primer lugar en su sección, cuatro veces: 2004, 2005, 2006 y 2008, y 3er. lugar en 2009.

El Club de Yates Chicago enseña también a jóvenes, sin experiencia previa, destrezas de navegación mediante el programa Exploradores Marinos. Para más información, de clases y cómo involucrarse, llame al (773) 477-9651 o visite chicagoyachtclub.org o juddgoldmansailing.org. ■

Sailing: A Pass Time for Latinos

Lou Sandoval has turned his sailing hobby into a profession and wants to share his passion for the sport with other Latinos.

"As the Latino community grows and our youth venture out beyond the traditional activities, one of the areas that can provide opportunities for educational funding are collegiate sailing programs," Sandoval said.

Some of the sailing programs he spoke about take place in Chicago neighborhoods, such as the Judd Goldman Adaptive Sailing Program offered through the Chicago Park District and provides classroom and on-water instruction for people with disabilities.

Another program, offered through Judd Goldman, is a Junior Sailing Program that teaches 8 to 12 year olds how to sail at the Humboldt Park Lagoon, 1400 N. Sacramento Ave., and at the Garfield Park Lagoon, 100 N.

"How great it would be if we had community sailing programs that Latino [youth] could participate in and expose them to the sport," Sandoval said. "Fast forward that vision to those youth competing alongside young sailors of diverse backgrounds in some [of] our country's top university sailing programs."

Sandoval's commitment to sailing started when he was introduced to it at age 10 during Boy Scout Camp. Now, as a regular member of the Chicago Yacht Club, his interest in sailing continues to grow: he co-owns Karma

Yacht Sales along with his business partner and brother.

This weekend, Sandoval will be one of over 3,500 sailors that will be participating in the 102nd Chicago Yacht Club Race to Mackinac on July 24. The sporting event is the oldest annual freshwater race in the world and features about 375 boats racing 333 miles from the Chicago Lighthouse (just off Navy Pier) to Mackinac Island, Mich.

Sandoval will be competing in the race for the 11th time. His sailing crew has won first place in his section four different times: 2004, 2005, 2006, 2008 and 3rd place in 2009.

The Chicago Yacht Club also teaches youth, with no previous experience, sailing skills through the Sea Scouts program. For more information on classes and how to get involved, call (773) 477-9651 or visit chicagoyachtclub.org or juddgoldmansailing.org. ■
